Some Health Proverbs.

Lexington, Ky., Phone 49

Here are some health proverbs which should be pasted in the hat:

"The man who says he would rather have smallpox than be vaccinated never had the smallpox.'

"An open window is better than in open grave."

"Warm rooms have killed more people than ever froze to death.

"If you let the child have the measles when he is young you may save a doctor's bill later on, out you may have to pay the unetaker now."

"A good iron pump costs less ask the undertaker."

Stack of Gold.

Stacked in one of the corners of the steel ribbed vaults of the United States Treasury in Washington $300,000 in gold coin is going begging. The government cannot give it away, yet none of the rightful owners can be induced to bride. It was much in favor of this take it. It represents unclaimed interest on the public debts. Somewhere in nooks and crannies out-of-the-way places are the government's interest checks for the money which never have been cashed. Some of them never will be presented, others may be brought around in time, and some are be- given was unanimously approved by ing held by cautious investors. Scandinavian Courtship.

It was considered beneath the dig nity of a Scandinavian warrior to court his bride by gallantry and sub mission; he always waited until she nad bestowed her affections on anoth er and was in her way to the mar riage ceremony, then collecting his faithful followers they fell upon the wedding party and carried away the practice that marriages were always celebrated at night.

SECRET OF THE NEAT GIRL BESETTING SIN OF

It is Nothing More Nor Less Than Taking Care of Her Clothes.

We all have among our acquaintances the girl who, without being in the least good looking, always manages to look neat and well dressed

Perhaps she has only a small dress allowance, and vet whenever you happen to meet her she looks smart and attractive, while other girls. with twice the money at their command, too often look shabby and dowdy.

What is the neat girl's secret? Nothing more nor less than taking care of her clothes; she has a place for everything and everything is kept in its place; her ribbons, gloves, handkerchiefs, etc., are not all huddled together in one drawer, neither do they lie about on the tables and chairs until they are wanted. Every article of apparel is put away with the most scrupulous care, first being dusted, shaken or mended, as the ease may be.

There is a great difference, too. in the way in which girls put on their clothes; and very often a girl dressed in a shirtwaist and plain spirt will look twice as neat as the one clad in an expensive gown, the reason being simply and solely this: The one has put her dress on anyhow, the other has taken care that all shall be neat and fresh,

It is the duty of all parents to see that their children are taught from their babyhood to take proper care of their wearing apparel; for the child who lets clothes drop off her and lie in a heap on the floor invariably grows into the careless, untidy woman, with whom we are so familiar.

FACING DEATH.

Why should we consent even to the semblance of lack of courage in our pagan trappings of wee at every death? We may well grieve that we are left behind; that a comrade whose face and voice and interpretation of life make half our joy should pass beyond our grasp. But if we believe that death is going to justify itself there is no right or reason in emphasizing grief. We were made to go onward, writes Louise Collier Willcox, in Harper's Bazar. There is no permanent stoppage in the great processional pageant passing from one eternity to another. And when we are forced to wave "farewell" to one who goes beyond our sight, let it be courageously and with a solemn gladness. There is nothing to be commiserated," writes the good gray poet to one about to die "I do not commiserate-I congratu-

Extravagance Perhaps the Most Prolific Cause of Subterfuge and Embarrassment.

Of all the sins which beset womankind today in every section of society and every degree and every class, the sin of extravagance is perhaps the most prolific of subterfuges and embarrassment.

Economy is every day becoming more of an irksome task than the exercise of a virtue which leads ultimately to comfort and peace of

These opinions sound very much like copybook platitudes, but their primitive familiarity does not make them any the less true.

In the old days an extravagant woman became notorious. She was one of a few, and she was generally to be found among those who had been suddenly pitchforked into heights of eminence from a comparatively low position.

The wardrobe excesses of Josephine form appalling reading, with heir hundreds of sets of things, and evidence more than anything the ulgarity of the parvenu.

Maria Theresa, on the other hand, he second wife of Napoleon, conducted her expenditures on moderate lines, although springing from one of the most ancient courts of Extravagance is not necessarily an appendange of rank. It is, as a rule, the outward and visible sign of the man who has made riches quickly and who desires that his women folk should blazon it forth to the world by running through the whole gamut of modern pleasures in the most costly possible way.

MAN FROM WEST TOUCHED!

Has Experience on Broadway With Panhandler, Old to Game and Half Drunk.

A broad-shouldered westerner was walking down Broadway with a friend. You could tell the man was from the far west even if he did not wear the big-brimmed hat that westerners, as a rule, affect. A panhandler, old to the game and half Irunk, spotted him.

"Gimme a dime, mister; gimme a lime," he pleaded hoarsely.

The westerner put his hand in his pocket and then looked at the beggar. The panhandler kept up his patter and clutched the westerner so that the stranger would not get away. The westerner got a whiff of the panhandler's breath and them shook the beggar off. "Go 'way," he ommanded, "Go 'way." The westorner looked so fierce that the panandler slunk away.

Then the westerner stopped.

"I can't go on, Russell," he said. 'That fellow is drunk, but he may be hungry." The westerner turned and went back to where the panandler was stationed. All the hange he had in his pocket, and it was considerable, he gave to the beggar. Then he rejoined his compan-

FATHER OF 36 CHILDREN.

Still living, at the advanced ago of eight-eight years, the father of 36 hildren and a husband five times, Charles Joseph Jones, former seamen, and at present a match salesman, who lives in Baltimore, post sesses an extraordinary history. Mr. Jones claims descent from the marriage of a real Indian chief and an octoroon.

Known far and wide in the vicinity of his residence, the venerable patriarch is a character of much general interest to his neighbors. Of his 36 children 14 sons served in the southern army during the civil war. He is the father of both twins and triplets.

LETTERS TO CORNWALLIS.

Robert McSwain of David county, near Mocksville, while riding horseback recently near Setzer's Hill. found a sealed bottle containing two letters dated January 13, 1781.

One of the letters was to Lord Cornwallis, who was then in command of the British forces, and the other to another British dignitary. Robert sent the letters to a brother in Salisbury, who in turn forwarded them to Washington. They were evidently lost or hidden by a British courier.-Winston-Salem correspondence Washington Post.
